One of the antigens present on the envelope glycoprotein (env) of human immunodeficiency virus type 1 (HIV-1) is a glycoprotein 120 (gp120). Gp120 is the receptor-binding subunit of the virus. The env gene contains several open reading frames (ORFs) encoding viral proteins. The N and C termini of the gp120 protein (protease cleavage sites) are located in the envelope glycoprotein complex (env), while a coding sequence is found in the 3' portion of the env gene. This coding sequence contains a second ORF, known as the env pseudogene. Here we report the identification of 19 env pseudogene sequences from 15 healthy HIV-1 infected individuals (9 males, 6 females, median age = 41 years) who are seropositive for HIV-1 and have a detectable serum HIV-1 antibody. These individuals were not symptomatic and were not on antiviral drugs at the time of blood sampling. One half of the healthy individuals were serodependent (i.e. seropositive for HIV-1 and had a CD4 cell count greater than 500 cells/mm³). The remainder had a CD4 cell count of between 400 and 500 cells/mm³. Seventeen of the pseudogene sequences described here were found to be related to the majority of the sequences previously 3e33713323
